CAMPAIGN UPDATE – our call to action to health workers on and around 5 May 2015

It's almost 5 May!

By simply clicking on this link you can find everything you need to take action in support of the 5 May 2015 call to action.

And then, a thank you message from Professor Didier Pittet:

Safe hands save lives, that is clear. The energy and commitment shown around the globe in support of 5 May is incredible! This social movement shows that health workers all over the world are committed to keeping patients safe every day with this simple, yet life-saving, action. Please keep going, please continue to promote hand hygiene at the point of care as a key quality indicator of safe health-care systems. I thank you and look forward to seeing more of your 5 May activities.

Tune in to Professor Pittet's Webber Teleclass on 5 May – register here.

Use the new WHO videos available on your websites and at your events to help raise awareness. One promotes #safeHANDS at the point of patient care and the other is from Professor Didier Pittet.

Make sure your photo appears on our photo wall too! Download your #safeHANDS board here and post it now.

Tell us if you are arranging a hand sanitizing relay between now and September 2015.

Launching very soon – new educational posters on the WHO Five Moments for Hand Hygiene, specifically in the context of peripheral and central venous lines, plus statements from governments around the world in support of ongoing hand hygiene action.

Sign your health-care facility up to the campaign if you haven't already done so and tell others to do this too. Even in some African countries where there are many challenges, new health-care facilities are signing up and demonstrating their amazing commitment to hand hygiene every week! Thanks to the Infection Control Africa Network (ICAN) for supporting this latest drive. The total number of health-care facilities now signed up is 17 522, across a total of 171 countries!

Thank you for your ongoing support. Keep checking our web pages for more 5 May 2015 resources.
